FLORIDA 4-H AWARDS AND RECOGNITION

Achieving Standards of Excellence
Achieving Standards of Excellence

Overview

We encounter standards at all ages and stages of life. Most have been developed by experts. Sometimes the individual responsible for achieving or living up to the standards is involved in developing them. Some standards have developed over time and are generally understood and accepted, though not written down.

Many “rites of passage” can be called standards. These include religious and civil ceremonies that indicate a stage of life has been reached. Examples include marriage; bar mitzvah, confirmation or catechism; voting eligibility; and registering for military service. Other rites of passage include buying a house, moving out of parent’s home, and retirement.

Societal requirements that indicate a level of ability of skill can be called standards. They include a driver’s license, Red Cross lifesaving certificate, CPR certificate, etc. Some standards define a level of education or qualifications to perform a specific job. These include a high school diploma; post high school degree; or licensing for nursing, engineering, social work, or teaching certificates. The levels of achievement in the horse project are 4-H examples.

Expectations about personal behavior often are less obvious standards. Examples include ground rules for a youth group or family rules. In some situations, adults set standards for young people. In others, youth and adults together establish standards. In some situations, standards are determined by the individual or group of people who are working toward the standards. Examples are social clubs, behavior expectations for a field trip, or grade contracts for academic work. It is important to remember that standards for behavior set by adults may be very difficult for youth to understand, and these standards often fail to take into account personal standards set by the young person.

Standards relate to a socially accepted product or positive behavior. However, standards can encourage deviant behavior. Examples of deviant behavior are when rules are used by groups to promote racial hatred, gang violence, or hazing.

Standards may be used to include or exclude people. This occurs in both the workplace and in private life. Standards for hiring or promotion can be established so personal characteristics aren’t used inappropriately in the workplace. In the private sector, standards can be used to prevent people from buying real estate in a certain neighborhood or joining a country club, sorority, fraternity, or fraternal organization. Standards can be used so inequities do not occur.

In 4-H educational programs, standards are used in two ways. First, standards are established by subject matter and youth development specialists to provide a base for young people to use as they plan and work toward their goals. Examples are exhibit criteria, scorecards, and judging sheets, etc. Second, professional staff and/or volunteers and young people work together to establish standards. Examples are behavior desired at 4-H camp, expectations of 4-H’ers involved in meetings, and appropriate dress for 4-H events.

Teaching young people skills needed to meet or achieve standards has a lifelong benefit. 4-H has excelled in recognizing 4-H’ers who have achieved standards of excellence, but we need to continue to improve the way we use this type of recognition. A special thanks to Andy Toelle, Kelsey Cook, Sarah Hensley, Geralyn Sachs, and Laura Valencia for their efforts in bringing this publication to fruition.

Frequently Asked Questions

What Are Performance Standards? - Performance standards are a set of guidelines for member participation; in Florida, there are several options for youth and/or clubs to work toward. As members or groups complete the levels of standard, they are presented an award.

What Is Expected of 4-H Members? - There are levels of standards listed in each age category. The expectations become greater as the 4-H member matures through Cloverbud, Junior, Intermediate, and Senior levels. There are different levels of 4-H achievement recognition in each category. The levels of standards are based on participation in the 4-H program on the County, District, State, and National 4-H events, as well as Leadership, Citizenship, and Community Service project areas. The standards of excellence color levels are cumulative. 4-H’ers must achieve all of the requirements for each color level in order to progress to the next.
Why Are Performance Standards a Part of the 4-H Program?
Performance standards make youth aware of the opportunities available in the 4-H program and to encourage members to become active participants.

Who awards the members for achieving performance standards?
The club’s volunteer leader will verify the achievement of the standard when the 4-H member has completed their work. Additional recognition will be given to members at the county or state level based on the performance standard achieved.

What is awarded to the members?
4-H members at each age level should have age appropriate awards. It is suggested that the County Office provide awards based on their ability to recognize youth. An easy way for counties to recognize youth might be to take the following suggestions:

- BRONZE Clover: Member will receive a BRONZE Clover Certificate and name printed in the 4-H newsletter.
- SILVER Clover: Member will receive a SILVER Clover Certificate, Clover points and name printed in the 4-H newsletter.
- GOLD Clover: Member will receive a Gold Clover Certificate, Clover points, and name printed in the 4-H newsletter. An invitation to age specific activities may be included.
- EMERALD Clover: Member will receive an EMERALD Clover Certificate, Clover points, name printed in the 4-H newsletter and name in a news article submitted to the local newspaper for publication. An invitation to age specific activities may be included.

When Are These Awards Given to Members?
These awards might be presented during a 4-H meeting or during a special recognition program.

Are Clubs Eligible for Performance Standards Recognition?
Clubs may strive to meet specific standards of performance just as many club members will work to achieve standards. Each of the four levels of standards are available for clubs to achieve.

What Other Types of Recognition Are Associated with Achieving Standards?
In addition to performance standards, 4-H members may also be recognized for Achievement of Standards through the preparation or demonstration of a product or behavior that is evaluated by an expert and deemed to meet the pre-determined standards for a quality product or behavior. These standards are often a part of the judging process seen at fairs and exhibits. Some examples of these pre-determined standards are the scorecards used for 4-H demonstration/illustrated talks, share the fun, public speaking or fashion revue. Copies of these standard scorecards can be found in the appendix of this module. Additionally, many 4-H programs provide the pre-determined standards use for products for exhibition.

There are several systems of recognizing youth against these standards, an often used one is the Danish System of blue, red and white awards. The Danish System of ribbons is usually interpreted to mean there is no special formula about the number of blue, red or white ribbons to be given. Quality, measured against product standards and fulfillment of exhibit requirements determine the ranking. An accepted standard for ribbons are as follows:

- BLUE overall the work is of high quality. Excellent.
- RED overall the work is of average quality. Good.
- WHITE overall the work is below average quality. Fair or Needs Improvement.

The Florida 4-H Events website provides listing of all the rules and regulations for district, state and national competitive and non-competitive 4-H events and activities. Specific rules and regulations for National competitions are available from the Florida 4-H Events Coordinator.
